

Dear Friends of TWTC:

We are pleased to present our 2006 Annual Report, which provides an overview of our programs and activities during the period of July 1, 2005, to June 30, 2006.

In the past year, TWTC marked its 15th anniversary by celebrating past accomplishments, expanding both our current funding base and services, and taking steps to create a long, bright future for our programs. TWTC's new Development Department, under the capable direction of Anita Flores, brought in more than $300,000 in foundation and individual support. Sen. Richard Durbin and Rep. Rahm Emanuel, helped TWTC secure three years of federal funding to support the PACT Program.

In terms of new programs, we successfully launched a new Breastfeeding Initiative which has educated nearly one hundred TWTC clients about the benefits of breastfeeding and supported them in breastfeeding their newborns. Our Parenting Program began offering support groups for older children whose mothers are at TWTC. In addition, with support from the Illinois Department of Public Health, TWTC was not only able to offer a day-long event focused on HIV/AIDS and the African American Community for TWTC clients, the young mothers from TK high school and other community members, we also expanded our ability to offer HIV/AIDS education and services to our at-risk or already positive clients.

Also, TWTC sought to increase our profile with a broad range of legislators and others who are in a position to advocate on our behalf. We were pleased to host visits by Mrs. Michelle Obama (who then joined our Honorary Board), Senator Richard Durbin, State Senator Mattie Hunter, DCFS Director Brian Samuels, and Judge Martin Bishop, as well as a legislative breakfast for Illinois State Senators and Representatives.

We are proud of the growth we've experienced in this fiscal year. On behalf of our women, children and staff, we thank you - those who are new to our family and those who have walked with us for years -- for your support -- together, we've changed a lot of lives for the better.

Sincerely,

Jewell Oates, Ph.D.

“I’m a different person now. TWTC taught me how to live, how to be productive. They taught me how to work. I never had a job before. Now I save money, pay my bills. Two years ago, I paid taxes for the first time! I’ve got two jobs, I’m a CNA, and I make jewelry. I’ve got my own apartment. I’m peaceful, serene. Things don’t bother me like they used to, I know how to deal with things.”

PROGRAMS AND SERVICES FOR WOMEN

TWTC, which pioneered the State of Illinois' approach to treating women with drug problems, has created a continuum of care based on proven principles of effective treatment:

Longer treatment leads to better outcomes: Our continuum of care can deliver services for up to two years.

Women do better in treatment when they have their children with them: At TWTC, children up to age 5 can stay with their mothers in treatment.

Treatment must address issues beyond addiction: Recognizing that our clients have a wide range of medical, mental health, employment, housing, education and social service needs, TWTC offers an array of wraparound services to meet all a client's needs.

Women have different treatment needs than men: TWTC treatment programs are gender-based and culturally sensitive.

Women will stay in treatment if all the services they need are readily available: TWTC's one-stop-shopping approach ensures ease of access to needed services, keeping women in treatment longer.

Our innovative programming based on proven treatment strategies has made TWTC a national model for the treatment of women with children.

"I was out there for 22 years. I was pitiful, had a real nasty attitude. TWTC turned my life around, taught me to control my attitude. I'm happy now, I've accomplished a lot of things. I've worked at the same place since 1998, I own my own house, I've bought four cars. I've got a good relationship with my mom. I got all three of my kids back, and I've got a real good relationship with them. They're doing well. TWTC taught me how to cope with them, teach them manners. They helped me control my attitude toward them."

Medically Monitored Detox Unit

In FY2006, 851 women were admitted to Detox.

TWTC's Detox Program, housed in one of only two-free-standing medically monitored detox units in Chicago, is designed to ensure a safe withdrawal process.

The TWTC Detox Unit is comprised of 16 beds. Women needing assistance withdrawing from opiates, alcohol or other drugs can stay for up to 10 days. A physician and nursing staff, as well as substance abuse counselors, monitors each client's progress. The unit is staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Clients may be prescribed medication to help ease physical discomfort during the process.

In our earliest days, some of our mothers told us that they did not come to Detox sooner because they had no safe place to leave their children. To remove this barrier to treatment, we created Nana's Crisis Nursery, where the children of women needing Detox, or others in crisis, can receive round the clock care until their mothers are able to care for them.

"I struggled in Detox, I wasn't sure I wanted to stay clean. They put me on methadone, but I went out on an appointment and got high. But they didn't kick me out, they worked with me. They strengthened me, they encouraged me to give treatment a try. That's why I went on to Res II. I learned to be honest with myself, to deal with issues, whatever they were. People gave their time to me. That's how I got through it. I'm so grateful. I love life sober, I love it. My plan is to continually give it back to another sister."

RESIDENTIAL TREATMENT PROGRAMS

In FY2006, 683 women went through TWTC's Residential Programs.

For many women, achieving long-term sobriety requires building a solid base of recovery knowledge and skills. To do this, often-times women need residential treatment, where they can get 24-hour support, removed from the pressures of home.

TWTC offers four residential units, two for women who have brought children ages 0-5 with them to treatment, and two for women who did not bring children to TWTC.

The average length of stay in residential treatment is three months. Each residential unit offers a wide-ranging recovery curriculum based in women-centered practices, including substance abuse treatment and education in life skills, conflict management, domestic violence and health, offered in group settings.

Women in residential treatment also receive medical and mental health services when identified as needed.

Each woman participates in developing her treatment plan to promote a buy-in to her recovery process.

Pregnant women and those with children in residence also participate in TWTC's Parenting Program, to build strong, healthy relationships with their children. They also become involved in their children's education by volunteering in the Daycare and Pre-Kindergarten Programs.

"It took me so long to get recovery. I was in my addiction for 30 some odd years. And then when I got to TWTC, I gave them such a hard time, I was hard-headed. But TWTC gave me my life back, taught me responsibility. My recovery is the most important thing in my life. I don't regret the past. I was a people pleaser. Now I put God first, then Betty. I'm grateful, and I'm proud of who I am today. Now I'm trying to help other girls who've been through what I've been through."

TWTC'S OUTPATIENT PROGRAMS

In FY2006, 667 women participated in TWTC's Outpatient Programming.

TWTC's Outpatient Programs provide services to women who need less intensive treatment services than those provided by residential treatment.

We offer four levels of outpatient programming: Intensive Outpatient, for women who still require substantial support; Outpatient, for women who need fewer hours of treatment; Project Futures, a six-month program for DCFS-referred women with infants and young children, who are in danger of losing custody of their children because of substance abuse; and Medication-Assisted Therapy, for women who need adjunct medical therapy to maintain sobriety. Each of these programs is tailored to meet the needs of its particular clientele.

TRANSITIONAL LIVING PROGRAMS

In FY2006, 122 women lived at TWTC's Recovery Home and Madison Place.

Some of the women in outpatient programming live at home with their families and come to TWTC every day for their treatment.

However, some women are not yet ready to return home, and continue to need the support of a recovery-based environment.

TWTC offers two transitional living units:

Recovery Home: Located in TWTC's main building, it provides clients with a safe place to continue treatment and focus on other needs, such as education, jobs and housing, that will help them build new lives.

Madison Place: In this secure apartment-living facility, women are either in school, training or working. They are maintaining a household and parenting their children, all in preparation for returning to their communities.

" [Outpatient] taught me about responsibility, integrity. I learned structure, how to set boundaries, how to comply with rules and regulations. Now I'm working for a nursing degree. I get good grades. I've got a positive outlook on life. I'm so grateful, I get emotional when I think about it. I feel like I'm on a honeymoon. It just feels so good every day."

PROGRAMS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS

The IL Dept. of Corrections Program is an Illinois community-based alternative-to-prison program for women. It provides outpatient treatment, parenting skills and education, case management referral, and medical monitoring to inmates who are mothers with infants and young children and who have less than two years to serve for non-violent offenses.

These inmates are transported to TWTC's Recovery Home and stay with us until their sentences are completed.

The Parents and Children Together (PACT) Program* started with a federal grant in 2002. It is a program that helps incarcerated mothers stay involved in their children's lives. Using videoconferencing technology to connect them in real time, PACT gives mothers in Decatur Correctional Center the chance to visit with their children in Chicago, help with school work, and renew the bond that these families need to stay strong during this time of separation.

This year, PACT expanded its services by providing links to children and caregivers to community-based agencies for assistance, and by starting support-groups for the PACT children to help them deal with their mothers' absences

*This project was supported by Grant #03-DB-BX-0037, awarded by the Corrections Program Office, Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice, through the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority. Programs and Services that Help Stabilize Families

TWTC was created by the State of Illinois because the absence of comprehensive family-based treatment was and continues to be a health, child-welfare, and criminal justice crisis.

TWTC's continuum of care, combined with the wrap-around services offered, are the basis of our family-based approach. As women move through our levels of care, they receive parenting support and education, assistance with criminal justice issues, and treatment for mental health and health problems.

Families are included in treatment in a variety of ways: Fathers are encouraged to participate in daycare activities; Family education for parents and significant others is provided on site, while more specialized family therapy referrals are available through our extensive network of connections to community-based agencies. We ensure that women and their families are linked to the health, social, housing and other services that they may need.

New Program Initiative

This year, for the first time, we have been able to reach out to the older children of our residents by providing them with monthly support groups to help them deal with the effects of their mothers' addictions. These groups help us identify children and youth at risk for mental health problems or substance abuse and link them to the help they need.

“What makes TWTC different than other places is the family orientation. And I don't mean just kids, your parents are brought in, you get to work on your relationship with them. My relationships with my whole family are much better. I've learned how to live life, how to handle every day situations. I'm just an average person trying to get by. I'm at a stage where, looking back, I never could have dreamed of being content, peaceful, but I am. I'm walking down the path I want to walk.”

PARENTING, DAYCARE AND PRE-K PROGRAMS

TWTC's combination of high-quality children's programming and parenting programming are the cornerstones of our family-based approach. Together, they form a comprehensive initiative aimed at helping families heal.

Our children's programming consists of Nana's Crisis Nursery, for children whose mothers are temporarily unable to care for them; the Infant/Toddler Daycare for children ages 6 weeks to 3 years, and a Pre-Kindergarten program run jointly with Chicago Public Schools for 3 and 4 year olds that prepares them to enter school.

While in our programs, all children receive developmental and medical screenings, early intervention services as needed, and developmentally appropriate education.

The primary goal of TWTC's Parenting Program is to strengthen and improve the parenting skills and family relations. Every mother in residential treatment gets an individualized parenting treatment plan. Program activities include a parenting skills group, individual parenting instruction, and videotaped parent-child interaction sessions, as well as nurse-run groups on childbirth, and pre- and post-natal infant and maternal care.

Parenting specialists, family life workers and childcare staff are assigned to both of the residential units with children. This allows us to monitor mother/child interactions in a variety of settings -- playtime, bedtime, mealtime, school time -- and provide immediate feedback that promotes healthy relationships.

"TWTC was the family I never had. They accepted my daughter with disabilities and got her therapy. Now I've got custody of all of my kids. I took the stuff I learned in Parenting -- the importance of bonding, quality time, discipline techniques -- and use them at home. I think of my oldest daughter as my "gifted child" because I wasn't part of her life for seven years, but now I have her back. My middle child is my "miracle child" because I used when I was pregnant with her and she's okay. My third child is my "star" because I can give him everything I was ever taught at TWTC."
